The entry-level rosé 2017 Roselito has less Albillo, "only" 20% (in good years, it has up to 30%), and has a slightly darker color (more Tempranillo). The whole clusters were pressed directly and together, and the must fermented after settling in stainless steel with indigenous yeasts. The nose is still a bit dizzy, but it has a serious palate, with some chalky tannins and very tasty flavors. Straight, serious rosé. It was bottled in January 2018. 31,000 bottles produced.
