The 2017 Antídoto had retained some carbonic gas and felt ripe and approachable, quite impressive for the vintage, which wasn't as bad in this zone as it was in other zones of Ribera, but they also had some frost and lower yields. There are notes of plums and flowers, spices and integrated oak. The palate is soft and polished, with integrated acidity and fine tannins. 45,000 bottles produced. It was bottled in November 2018.
